

WHO TOOK SHERMAN'S BATTERY?—A letter to the Raleigh Standard, from Capt. York, answers this question fully:—

"Several regiments claim the honor of silencing and taking this battery. It was taken by the 6th Infantry N. C. State Troops. The regiment was led up within 40 yards of it, and their fire silenced it, and Col. Lightfoot, Maj. Webb, Capt. Kirkland, Avery, and Lieutenants Avery and Mangum, marched right up to it with their men, and passed beyond it, and received a galling fire from the left, when they were ordered to cease firing and fall back. Maj. Webb was resting on one of the pieces, facing the fire, and our men retreated in good order, all the while delivering their fire." Around Sherman's batteries where our Regiment fired, every horse and cannoner was killed, and lay in one indiscriminate heap. All over the battle field were strewn the dead and dying. Some had placed their arms under their heads as they went to their last sleep. Others folded their arms across their breasts, some with features distorted and fists clenched as they wrestled in the agonies of death; others wore the calm, placid smile which should grace the face of a soldier dying in a glorious cause. In the little clump of cedars, the wounded had crawled and died, and lay there in ghastly heaps.

"That portion of the Regiment rallied by the gallant Lightfoot and Webb, pitched into the hottest of the fight, and joined in the final charge, when the enemy were put to a precipitate flight, and joined in the pursuit for several miles. No more gallant spirits strode over that field, than Lt. Col. Lightfoot and Maj. Webb. The remainder of the regiment, under different officers, fell in with other regiments and fought to the last. No regiment behaved with more bravery and gallantry than the North Carolina 6th Infantry, on that memorable field. Led up into the hottest of the fight, within a few yards of a battery that was raking our army, they delivered their fire with the deadliest precision."

COL. FISHER'S REGIMENT.—A letter from Captain Craige of the Rowan Company (eldest son of Hon. Burton Craige,) is mentioned in the Salisbury Watchman, as stating that "his Company suffered more severely than any other one in the Regiment. [It had 7 killed and 6 wounded.] They charged upon and took two of the guns belonging to the celebrated Sherman's battery, and considering the fearful odds against them, and the dangers of the exploit, the wonder is not that they suffered so much but so little."

We were pained to learn, as our paper was going to press last evening, that Lieut. W. P. Mangum, son of ex-Senator Mangum, died of the wound received at the great battle on the 21st inst. We had hoped from accounts previously received, that the wound was not so serious.—Hillsboro' Recorder, 31st.

THE 5TH STATE REGIMENT.—The Salisbury Banner publishes a letter from Capt. Samuel Reeves Jr. to his father in that place, dated Bull Run, July 23d, in which he says,—

"On Sunday 21st, we passed through the battle—our Regiment had not much to do in it. My company were thrown into the woods as skirmishers. They were fired on by the enemy once, and stood the fire well, not a man flinched. They returned the fire promptly, and repulsed the company who fired on them. Afterwards they saw more of the enemy, a few, only six of my men fired and killed 4 men (Yankees.) That ended all we did. I have the pleasure to report that I had not one man killed or wounded, all sound and well and perfectly happy—although we have lain on the creek bank three nights, without anything but blankets. We have plenty of meat and bread all the time. Our Regiment lost only 2 men killed and 6 or 8 wounded."

Fifth Regiment State Troops.—The Richmond Dispatch speaks in high terms of Col. McRae's regiment in the battle of Manassas. Lt. Colonel J. P. Jones and the Chaplain of the regiment, Rev. James Sinclair, commanded in the absence of Col. McRae, who could not be present on account of a serious injury to his ankle.

The 1st Reg't N. C. State Troops arrived at Petersburg on Saturday night last. Col. M. S. Stokes, Lieut. Col. M. W. Mansom, Surgeon Dr. Charles J. Gee. The Express says, that like all other North Carolina Reg'ts, this one comes armed and equipped in the most excellent manner.

The 2d Regiment of North Carolina Volunteers were presented with a handsome Flag on the 29th, by the Ladies of Norfolk, Va.
